

Research Librarian
Legislative Reference Bureau
State of Hawaii

The Legislative Reference Bureau (LRB) is a non-partisan legislative service agency that provides a wide variety of services to Hawaii legislators, legislative staff, other government agencies and members of the public. The LRB Library is a Division of LRB and serves as a specialized legislative library, the primary purpose of which is to provide research, reference, and information services to the Legislature and legislative staff. It is a repository of select state legislative documents.

Position Description Overview:

The primary duties of the Research Librarian include: providing reference and research assistance, being responsible for circulation of library materials using the library's ILS, creating web content and ready reference materials, managing the distribution of the Hawaii Revised Statutes and Session Laws of Hawaii to Bureau staff, assisting with cataloging projects, indexing print and electronic publications, providing education and training, and completing other duties as may be assigned by the Head Librarian or LRB Director.

Minimum Qualifications:

Master's degree in library or information science from a program accredited by the American Library Association (ALA). Candidates should possess exceptional interpersonal communications skills and be computer literate. Self-motivation, discretion, and attention to detail are essential. Regular and timely attendance is an essential function of this job to ensure continuity of services. During the legislative session (January-May), librarians must be available to work extended hours.

Note: Applicants who are in their last semester of an ALA accredited Master's degree program and who will graduate upon the completion of the semester will be deemed to meet the Minimum Qualification requirements upon their graduation and will have their resumes accepted for review.

Desirable Qualifications:

- Familiarity with the Hawaii Legislature and a broad understanding of state government operations.
- Experience providing reference assistance and familiarity with sources of information relating to Hawaii and the Pacific.

Applications:

Interested applicants should email a letter of inquiry, resume, and a minimum of 3 professional references no later than June 28, 2024 to lrb@capitol.hawaii.gov.
